

CONTENTS

I	INTRODUCTION	1-12
II	CHAPTER 1	13-44
	i) History and Identity: Literary Perspective	17
	ii) Slavery: The Foundation of African American Identity	25
	iii) African American Literature: Iteration of Racial Ancestry	27
	iv) Race and Sexuality: Black Women's Identity Crisis	33
	v) Hybridity in African American Identity: Racial Purity and Racial Mixture	34
	vi) The Third Space and African American Identity:	38
	vii) Toni Morrison and African-American Identity	41
III	CHAPTER 2	45-83
	i) Slavery and the Racial Experience in Beloved	45
	ii) Migration and the Racial Experiences in Jazz	55
	iii) Disallowance, Racial Segregation and Reconstruction in Paradise	61
	iv) Racial Hybridity and the 'New Negro':	70
	v) Theoretical Perspectives in Narrating the Black Experience: Hybridity and the Third Space	72
IV	CHAPTER 3	84-118
	i) Historical Significance of Morrison's Trilogy	86
	ii) Remembering the Experiences of Slavery in Beloved :	88

iii)	Historicising the Black Freedom in Jazz :	92
iv)	History of Desegregation and Construction of Black Township in Paradise :	99
v)	Memory of motherhood Under Slavery	102
vi)	Recreating History through Storytelling:	106
vii)	Memory of Wounds and Scars Used for Recreating History:	107
viii)	Collective Memory in Reconstructing History:	110
ix)	Rewriting American History: Morrison’s Canon Fodder	113
x)	Memory and Myth: Reconstruction of Black Cultural History	116
V	CHAPTER 4	119-172
i)	Ambivalence of Cultural Identity: Third Space and the Trilogy	119
ii)	Beloved : Rewriting the History of the Racial “Others”	124
iii)	Jazz : Retelling the Cultural History of Black Freedom	139
iv)	Paradise : Enunciation of a Black National Identity	153
VI	CHAPTER 5	173-191
i)	Summing up the Discussion	173
ii)	Discursive Cultural Ambivalence and the Third Space	180
iii)	Concluding Remark	188
VII	WORKS CITED	192-196