- (i) Now the Chinese employees were assigned tasks by the people they have never seen before and whom they did not understand. Many misunderstandings occurred, some were quite costly.

(ii) The employees back in Europe were only concerned with whether the assigned tasks were completed and did not consider any other obligations to the Chinese employees, such as taking care of the relationships with the Chinese government, banks, etc.

(iii) Eventually, the local employees became frustrated and were ready to leave the company.

The result was that the management model was changed again and a single Managing Director of the subsidiary was accountable for all business activities in Hong Kong.

Case Study :

Whither an MBA at Strutledge ?

Strutledge is a small private liberal arts school located within 50 miles of a major urban area in the Southeast United States. As with most institutions of higher education, Strutledge's cost are rising and its enrollments are decreasing. In an effort to expand its student base, build valuable ties with area businesses and simply survive the Board of Regents is considering establishing an MBA program.

Currently no undergraduate degree is given in business, although business courses are taught. The dean of the school visualizes the MBA as an interdisciplinary program emphasizing problem solving, communication and global awareness. Faculty expertise would be supplemented by instructors from local industry. The use of local faculty would better connect the university with the business community and provide opportunities for employment of the program's graduates.

In terms of competition, a major state-funded university that offers an MBA is located in the adjacent urban area. Strutledge hopes that state budget cutbacks and perceptions of overcrowded classrooms and overworked professors at public institutions will open the door for a new entrant into the market. The Board of Regents also feels that the school's small size will allow Strutledge to tailor the MBA program more closely to area business needs.

Several members of the Board are concerned about recent reports of the dwindling value of an MBA and are wondering if a better niche could be found with another graduate degree, perhaps a master of science in business analytics or something in the education or healthcare field.

- (i) What action would you recommend to the Board of Regents?
- (ii) How should Strutledge go about making a strategic decision such as this?
